

For an event that rests on the word "LETTERS" how's this for a word to massage a tongue – "otorhinolaryngology"? However, it is pronounced or used, it still wraps itself around Andrew Jacono, M.D. extraordinaire. A graduate of Kings Park High School, Class of 1988, he has dented the world of medicine.

His academic path includes Albert Einstein College of Medicine, St. Vincent's Hospital, NY Eye & Ear, University of Rochester, and North Shore University Hospital. He is one of only 39 surgeons in the United States that is an Advanced Training Director for the American Academy of Facial Plastic and Reconstructive Surgeons.

All his knowledge and skill has led to an extensive published library dealing with restoration of the human body. Books, research, teaching, and medicine around the world creates a busy, creative and exciting life. No tiny bio can describe the extent of Andrew Jacono's mark on the world.

He appears on T.V., is written up extensively in magazines, is honored by the government, and crosses the USA and the world doing pro-bono surgery for those in desperate need.

Less we forget, remember this kid's from Kings Park. His abilities, his contributions, and his general kindness, provides the town of Kings Park with a lot of honor and pride. What Andrew Jacono, M.D., accomplishes would, prior to 1940's, be comparable to the medical masters of the world. To honor him is a privilege. To be attached to him is a prize. For Kings Park students be a figure of emulation.
