

After graduating in 1982 from Kings Park High School, Edward Nicoletti just charged into Boston University and began a multifaceted career lifestyle. This is the story of the ATHLETE WITH THE ARTIST HEART. Education, business and filmmaking were his majors. With a Masters degree and urge to expand his depth of artistic ability he went on to NYU and studied film and creative writing.

Taking his business expertise to the forefront, Ed founded an independent chain of video stores and wrote, produced and directed two feature films. "The Exchange", starring Robert Wahlberg, was best known. Since moving to California he has written twelve screen plays and a work in progress concerns George Washington. As a side interest Ed is working on a novel. To relax he does paintings, mostly in acrylic still lifes and realistic landscapes. These talents did not simply spring from within him one day. No, he studied with the greats - Thierry Pathe, PD James and Arthur Golden for writing, and under master artist Sandy Sokolove in painting.

The Nicoletti family has deep roots in Kings Park. Edward has stretched these roots across the country. With skills and passions in several art forms, Ed Nicoletti brings positive fame and honor to the Kings Park community.
