

After graduation from Kings Park High School in 1987, NYU in 1991, Eric Mirlis entered the professional world of sports. Following positions in the Media Relations Department of the New York Islanders and the Basketball Operations Department of the National Basketball Association, Eric joined CSTV/CBS College Sports in November of 2004 as an editor on the network's website before being named Managing Editor of NCAA.com. During his time with CBS, he authored his first book entitled "Being There: 100 Sports Pros Talk About the Best Sporting Events They Ever Witnessed Firsthand." It was published in the spring of 2006. In addition, Eric has worked as a statistician for many television and radio networks since 1990, and is a mainstay in many of the press boxes in the New York metropolitan area.

Eric is connected to a Montreal T.V. station. There's another book in the works. A talk with Eric produces endless sports stories.

