

A Newton High graduate and Queens College alumni, Frank Mercury has become the Kings Park community setting photographer. From the beaches to the baseball fields, to the model airplane flying meadow to any and all activities taking place, Mercuri will artistically produce the vibrant life of this town.

Frank is a product of Long Island Schools – brought up and employed by various sources on the Island. From the military days through all his employment resources he found that photography was an asset. Taking the talent and creativeness to his highest level, he made his world of photography. A world that stressed the positive, not the negative. A world that provides comfort and enjoyment, not disorder or grief.

Once Frank learned about cameras, lens, and lighting, an artist bloomed. Never to stop learning, Frank moved into electronics, DVDs, film, music overlays, and documentary products expanded his areas of creation. From black & white to color, from stills to movies, and from one individual to the entire school, Frank has made a determined effort to constantly record Kings Park for both the beauty of today and the memories of the future.

As all worthy talented individuals are Frank Mercury is a teacher trying to come out and have a class. He has created a photography club, and he has mentored aspiring students. The Heritage Museum is constantly the recipient of event recordings. He champions to all students the photographic opportunities and beauty that are part of the Kings Park area. Frank is part of that teaching force that permeates this diverse town, and we are better for it.
