

Here is the example of the star athlete proving his true abilities are not in sports, but in art. Art in writing: in communicating with the world.

Robert Carey, Kings Park Class of 1988, took his intellect to Columbia University and received a BA in Political Science, concentrating in American History and Politics. At one point he wrote for the New York Times; but it was his attachment to Successful Meetings Magazine that opened the world to Mr. Carey's talents. His career made him an editorial writer, an Executive Editor, an Editorial Director and into private publications. He has written and spoken at conferences on topics covering travel, business, sports, golf and communication skills. His awards include national presentations for outstanding writings through articles, issues and yearly magazine productions. His continual excellent writing talents as presented in the Successful Meetings Magazine has been often recognized.
