

Robert J. McCarthy graduated with the Kings Park High School Class of 1960. That could just about end the story; he just got absorbed by the USA. With stops in West Virginia, Virginia, North Carolina, New Mexico, Missouri, South Carolina and even KPPC. McCarthy was difficult to keep track of. But Joe Wolfer, Sal Misiano and Art Romita all clung to the trail and wouldn't allow Robert to lose his Class of '60 ties.

A 37 year career as a clinical psychologist was constantly interjected with some form of athletic association from baseball to karate and weight lifting. The body as well as mind was always active. Never out of sight was literature – writing articles, essays, short stories and novels. The “Quarry Steps Up” story opened up an extended horizon. New thoughts, new energy and new success.

After 60 years Robert McCarthy is where he should be – taking all that schooling and knowledge and creating literature with messages about how to live well. And on top of it all, Joe Wolfer, Sal Misiano and Art Romita have provided pathways home to Kings Park for Robert McCarthy. There's no ochlocracy in any of this.
