

Craig Biggio Inducted into Baseball Hall of Fame

By: Michael Ruggiero

Kings Park Heritage Museum

Biggio addresses the crowd at the Baseball Hall of Fame in 2015

Craig Biggio has become a nationally recognized sports player and role model not only through his athletic accomplishments, but his humility when doing so. Born in 1965, Biggio attended Kings Park High School where he excelled in multiple sports during his time there. He even turned down a highly accredited football scholarship to continue where his passion really lie, in baseball. He played for Seton Hall University alongside future major league players such as Mo Vaughn. Biggio was inducted into the Baseball Hall of Fame in July of 2015. Many of our very own “Kings Parkers” made the trip to Cooperstown to witness one of their own achieve the ultimate award. In his speech, Biggio acknowledged his alma mater and praised many of his past coaches for their encouragement and hard work. He thanked his hometown for the tremendous support and promised to never forget his roots.

~ Congratulations Craig! ~